This Week's Highlights and What's to Come

This week we used our delicious apples in a variety of ways. They were used for math, science, art, and writing. Each child used their observation skills, sorting and graphing ideas, and described their tastings in a shared writing experience. Also, we used our observation skills when comparing and contrasting different types of wood. We moved on to our next Superkid, Alf, and learned the short Aa sound, while performing many fun activities. It is very helpful when you are spending time together to review what letter sounds your child hears in words, listing rhyming words, practicing telling time and money. There was a great deal of excitement as we began our very first journal. The entire class is very proud of their ability to write what they hear. As Rosh Hashanah approaches, we have been talking about what we liked about the past year, and how we can make it even better next year. Mr. Growl has already been to many of your homes, after he makes it to all of them, he will be returning periodically. Shabbat Shalom!

Have a sweet year!

Dear Parents,

This week we learned the letters "vav" and "mem sofit". We learned ways to pronounce vav (o and u) and we learned words with mem sofit and vav. We worked in the centers and made pictures of the letters.

We also saw video songs we learned in class. Now we are learning the song "Shana Tova" for Rosh Hashanah.

Shabat Shalom!
